

The Flavor of London

Chinatown in London's bustling Soho neighborhood.

Perennially popular with culture vultures, theater buffs and royal watchers, the great city of London is now considered one off, if not the world's culinary capital.

Rock-star chefs, honoring and reinventing British cuisine, and the number and diversity of ethnic eateries are jaw-dropping. The breadth of choice includes 60+ Michelin star restaurants and a dynamic street-food scene. Borough and Brixton Markets and iconic department stores' extravagant foodhalls are delicious fun to explore. Anglophiles can indulge in a traditional High Tea and craft beer aficionados can compare 17th Century watering holes with food-focused gastropubs. We'd be pleased to customize a culinary adventure for you.

Customize Your Culinary Adventure

- Guided tasting tour of vibrant & historic Borough Market
- Guided multi-course street-food tasting tour of hip & happening Brixton Market
- Gastronomic walking tour of London's most-famous neighborhoods: Soho, Piccadilly Circus, Chinatown and Covent Garden

- Visit to the beehives on the rooftop of an elegant London hotel for a tutorial on urban beekeeping and honey tasting
- Traditional High Tea at Fortnum & Mason (or similar)
- Learn about Indian cuisine from an Indian chef and cookbook author via a Southall walking tour and a hands-on cooking lesson

THINK ABOUT STARTING WITH:

- 5 nights in well-located 4 or 5 star London Hotel – with breakfast
- An itinerary of curated edible experiences and a list of London's hottest restaurants

Call 617.825.0505 or visit www.forks-ontheroad.com

1 THE KENSINGTON HOTEL

Ensnconced in west london's posh south kensington neighborhood, this georgian townhouse, now a boutique hotel is as traditional as high tea (and they serve a lovely one here.) Walk to museums and top restaurants.

2 ST ERMIN'S HOTEL

Tucked away in central London, this 4-star luxury hotel has a boutique feel, gorgeous public spaces and a fascinating history. The rooftop boasts a colony of beehives and the honey is served with scones at breakfast. Sweet.

3 CLARIDGES

This iconic Mayfair landmark is a legend Crowned heads of Europe sleep here. Michelin star Chef Simon Rogan is at the helm of its exciting restaurant Fera where organic hand-picked produce is complimented by natural wild ingredients.

4 HAM YARD HOTEL

Located in Soho this new, hip hotel has award-winning British style and an urban village fee. Accommodations includes rooms, suites and 24 apartments. Its rooftop garden offers a sweeping view of the Soho skyline.